THE DAILY BULLETIN.

Published every afternoon and delivered in this city, the suburbs and Aberdeen by our carriers, at 6 CENTS a week.

It is welcomed in the households of men of both political parties, for the reason that it is more of a newspaper than a political journal.

Its wide circulation therefore makes it a valuable vehicle for business announcements, which we respectfully invite to our columns.

Of all kinds neatly, promptly and cheaply done at the office of the DAILY BULLETIN.

The Long-Lost Brother.

James Cranston entered a store with hurried step and wild look and inquired for the proprietor.

"Do you vants an oaferecoat made in Baris for only four dollars?" queried the latter as he hurried forward.

"Tis he!" muttered James as he steadied himself by hanging to the counter.

"Maybe you like to examine some undershirts for twenty-five cents?" continued the merchant.

"Henry, don't you know me?" called James.

"Or I can sell you der werry best socks in der market for only ten cents a pair. Shunst look at 'em! Wanderbuilt and Shay Goud buy shunst such socks as dese."

"You are my brother!"
"I sell baber colars for four cents a box!"

"My long lost brother!" and he rushed for him and both fell against the hot stove.

"Was he very drunk?" asked his Honor of the witness.

"He vhas, and he shoked me besides. But for my wife he might have kilt me."

"It seems," continued the court as he turned to the prisoner, "that you have lost a brother?"

"Yes, sir."

"How long since?"

"He left home twenty years ago."

"Well, I think I know where he is. One day last week I sent a man, who looks just like you, to the Work House for sixty days."

"Yes, sir, but you—"

"And you can go up there and look for him. It is a great place for brothers to find each other."

"Your Honor, can't I—"

"Not to-day. Fall right back or you'll be too late for breakfast up there. Your sentence is the same—sixty days. All in the family, you see—call the next."

How to Keep Warm.

The most sensible way of meeting a cold spell is to make the system a stove of itself, and this may be done by eating largely of highly carbonaceous food. In cold weather you ought to eat plenty of fat food—fat ham, pork and beans, bacon, fat beef, pork sausages—in fact, all manner of greasy aliment may be indulged in when the mercury has sunk into the basement of the thermometer. Food of this kind is slowly burned in the interior economy of the eater, but the animal heat evoked is greater than that produced by any other kind of animal food. Wear plenty of clothing, not necessarily in heavy outer wraps, which only keep off the wind, as in garments which cling closely to your skin and retain your animal heat—the heat you are making in your personal stove. Clothing by itself does not warm, but by its non-conducting power prevents animal heat from passing away from the body too rapidly, or the outside temperature from reaching the body. Then, as to sleeping arrangements. Lots of people fill the stoves in their chambers to red hotness, till the air is almost suffocating. This is a great mistake. The room should be no warmer than usual; but extra bed-covering should be used. He who goes to bed with an easy conscience, just enough food in his stomach to keep the gastric juice out of mischief, his room not warmer than 70 degrees, and enough clothes on him to keep the animal heat from passing off too rapidly, will sleep the sleep of the just whose notes are provided for.—Exchange.

Sinecures at Washington.

Before this house (the one occupied by Mr. Seward when he was attacked by Payne), for several years afterward, a sentry paced night and day, even when Mr. Seward had moved away and gone out of office. The same building was once used as a club-house, and from it Key had just issued when he was shot by Sickles. This lonely sentry, still at his post long after he had been forgotten at the War Department, and allowed to remain, I suppose, because no one thought it was his duty to relieve him, reminds me of several similar incidents that are related in Washington. The great falls of the Potomac are about sixteen miles above Washington, and during the war there was a station for the collection of provisions for the army on the bank of the canal near these grand cataracts. The road between Washington and Great Falls was several times raided by the Confederates, and a block-house was erected by the Federals at a point three or four miles above Georgetown to prevent parties of rebels from passing up and down the road. At the close of the war the defenses about the capital were one after another deserted, but nobody seems to have remembered the corporal's guard stationed out there on the Aqueduct road, and they remained on duty for a year or two. After they were relieved the block-house was set on fire by tramps or boys, and only a few blackened posts now mark its site. A still more remarkable case was that discovered by Gen. B. F. Butler about ten years ago. He was nosing around among the appropriations one day, when he discovered an officer in the Capitol whose duty he did not understand. He was "watching crypt." An investigation showed that many years ago it was proposed to deposit the bones of Gen. George Washington beneath the Capitol, and a crypt was prepared for that purpose. When it was completed, a public officer was appointed whose duty it was to watch this crypt and prevent its desecration, and there he had been ever since, growing gray in the service, and, while Congress had appropriated money to pay his salary year after year, nobody had thought it worth while to inquire how he earned it.—Washington Cor. Providence Press.

A Novel Idea.

A farmer in Iowa sends the following novel proposition respecting telephone facilities to the Iowa State Register: "Will not some of those smart patent-right men invent a cheap insulator? Then we can utilize our wire fences for telephones, and have the whole country connected and in speaking distance of each other. At the road crossings insulated cables can be run under ground, or regular poles can be planted to raise the wires above travel. In riding around I notice we have a continuous wire on the fences already. All we need is an insulator, costing a small sum and which is so arranged that the wire can be tightened, and held firmly and securely; and we shall have the line already strung that will do away with a telephone monopoly (if there is one). Then make each postoffice a telephone exchange, and business for farmers will be expedited, saving many trips to town to order parts of machinery, or to learn if some important letter has arrived. Visiting friends can notify us of their arrival on the train; hasty trips for medical assistance may be done away with, and many things not now thought of."

One of the latest applications of electricity is to the working of a forge hammer, much like a steam hammer in its arrangement.

The following statistics concerning Ohio river commerce are taken from the annual report of Mr. John Ferhenbach, supervising inspector of the seventh district. It is a remarkable showing and speaks well for the Steamboat Inspection service as well as for the officers of the steamers plying on the Ohio: During the year 112 vessels were inspected at Cincinnati, with a tonnage of 35,708.89; 16 vessels were built with a tonnage of 1,659.92, and 7 went out of the service having a tonnage of 2,273.01. During the year there were 36 collisions, destroying property aggregating $33,450. Fifteen explosions, involving the loss of 36 lives, and property aggregating $54,200. There were 18 fires, at which 45 lives were lost, and $211,700 of property destroyed. Twenty-two vessels were lost by striking snags, and 38 were foundered or wrecked. The aggregate number of casualties were 129, in which 86 lives were lost, and property to the extent of $653,449,000 was destroyed.

In the Seventh Supervising District, which includes the Ohio river and all its tributaries above the mouth of the Kentucky river at Carrollton, Ky., there are 353 steamers, which are owned in the district. The aggregate cost of these steamers was $6,784,341. During the year ending December 31, 1881, $494,511 were expended on these boats for repairs, $275,970 for equipments, $4,591,998 for running expenses, making a total, including the cost of steamers, of $12,146,820. These steamers transported during the year 12,448,471 tons of freight, and carried 4,286,614 passengers. Of this vast number of human beings carried not a single person lost his life.

THE ASHLAND MURDER.

Testimony of Wm. Ellis at the Trial.

"I have resided in Kentucky, at Ashland, since May; have been engaged as a laborer at Powell & House's brick yard most of the time; I am acquainted with the prisoner, Neal, also with Craft; we three worked together at the brick-yard; I did not see either of them during the day of December 23d; I saw them late that night; they came to my house and called me; I was in bed and asked what they wanted; Craft told me to get up, they wanted to see me; I did so, put on my clothes and boots and went out to the gate; Craft said, you must go with us. I asked him where. He said to the Gibbons', and we will have some fun; I said it was too late. I won't go; they said I had to go, and Craft drew his revolver; Neal said, bring him along, and we started, when we got inside of the gate at Gibbons', Craft picked up an ax and Neal got a crowbar from under the porch floor; Craft pried up the window and Neal was the first to go in, Craft next; I did not want to go in, but Craft drew his revolver and said come on, and I did so, they took the ax and crowbar in the house with them; we passed through the front room to the second or middle room, where the girls and Robbie were asleep; Craft and Neal went to the bed where the girls were; Craft took hold of Fannie Gibbons and Neal of Emma Thomas. They stifled the girls by putting their hands over their mouths and choking them. The noise awakened Robbie, who was sleeping on a lounge in the same room; Craft, who had choked Fannie Gibbons most to death, left her and struck Robbie in the head with an ax and killed him, and then returned to the bed. Neal dragged Emma Thomas off the bed on the floor, and Craft ordered me to hold Miss Thomas until Neal accomplished his purpose, which I did. After Neal let her go she began to raise up, crying, and said she was going home to tell her mother, Neal said: 'I guess not, and struck her on the head with the crowbar, and she fell back on the floor dead. Craft ordered me to come and help him; I went to the bed and put my hand on Miss Gibbons's shoulder, and Craft outraged her, after which he got up, got the ax and killed her. Craft said to me you have done none of the killing, but you must have some hand in it, and ordered me to get the coal-oil can and pour it over the dead bodies of the girls; I did so and Craft set them on fire, and we left the house; when we got out we separated, I going home; I don't know where they went; I got home about halfpast three o'clock; my wife got up to get breakfast; I lay down, but did not go to sleep; I heard the cry of fire about halfpast five; I was at breakfast; I went to the burning house, but did not stay long. On the following Sunday morning, Craft and I met at the spot where the house was burned, and Craft asked me to take a walk; he began to talk about the affair, and said it must be kept quiet; we met Neal, and we all talked about it; they wanted me to sign a pledge never to tell it; I told them I would think about it; they said I had better do it, and if I did not do so by the next Saturday night they would put an end to me; we separated and I went home, and Neal and Craft went together."

A MOVEMENT is on foot to organize another military company in Maysville.

COAL can now be had at the Maysville Elevators for 11 cents a bushel delivered.

ON account of smallpox at Richmond, a motion has made to remove the legislature to Norfolk.

J. H. HALL & Co., are shipping this week a large number of plows to Louisiana and Texas.

Mrs. T. F. STEVENS, of East Maysville, was severely injured on Monday last, by falling in a flower-pot.

It is now considered very probable that the apportionment of congressmen will be three hundred and nineteen.

THE clerk of the court of appeals holds his office for eight years, and is reputed to receive annually from $10,000 to $15,000 a year.

J. C. OWENS & Co. have shipped since the first of the month, sixty-seven car loads of coal over the Kentucky Central Railroad to the Interior.

A LETTER to the DAILY BULLETIN from Catlettsburg announces that the Mason County Guards are complimented on all sides for their soldiery bearing, fine discipline and gentlemanly deportment. Their friends here are glad to hear so good a report of them.

J. C. OWENS & Co., proprietors of the Merrimac warehouse, yesterday prized and shipped thirty-two hogsheads of tobacco. They received during the same time something over fifty thousand pounds. There were twenty-three wagons standing in front of the warehouse at one time, waiting to be unloaded.

LAST Saturday as the Potomac was going up the river near the mouth of Turkey Creek she got too close to the bank and struck a submerged log. It ran through and tore off part of her guard and carried away entirely the pantry and cook house. One deck passenger, a peddler of tin-ware could not be found after the accident and is supposed to have been lost.

LIEUT. ROBERT A. COCHRAN of the Mason County Guards arrived from Catlettsburg last night to obtain clothing for the command and will go back to-night. He reports the boys all well and comfortably quartered. We learn from him that the prosecution in the murder case consider there is ample corroborative testimony of Ellis' confession, that will be produced in the trial at the proper time.

THE Western Tobacco Journal published at Cincinnati has issued a book of twenty-four pages on the Cultivation and Curing of White Burley Tobacco, giving in detail all instructions from the planting of the seed-bed to the curing of it ready for the market. The book was written by a grower in Kentucky who sold some of his tobacco in the Cincinnati market in July 1881 at $65 a hundred pounds. The book no doubt contains valuable information to every grower of tobacco and should be in their hands. It sells for 25 cents.

LATEST FROM CATLETTSBURG.

Progress of the Murder Trial—Neal, Craft and Ellis Proved to Have Been Together at the Cemetery.

Startling Developments Expected Soon—Neal Believed to be Weakening and Expected to Make a Full Confession.

Special to DAILY BULLETIN.

CATLETTSBURG, Ky., January 19, 1882.—The Neal murder case is still dragging slowly along in the Circuit Court. Ten witnesses were examined this morning, among whom was Mrs. Simons who testified that she lived near the cemetery at Ashland and that on the morning of Christmas Day she saw three men standing together in the road near her house. She said they were there nearly an hour and appeared to be talking very earnestly. When the conversation ended they started in the direction of Ashland. The witness also testified that when they passed her house she recognized them as Wm. Neal, Ellis Craft, and she thought the other one was George Ellis. This testimony is regarded as very damaging to Neal. Mrs. Carroll a sister of Mrs. Simons who, was at the latter's house at the time she saw the men, corroborated her statement.

The other witnesses testified that for some time prior to the arrest of Neal he had acted very strangely and several of them stated that he had said to them that the children had been murdered with an ax and a crow bar. Nothing more of importance was developed by the testimony given this morning, but the most startling developments are expected very soon.

Neal, the prisoner, has shown more emotion and has appeared to be more excited this morning than at any other time since his arrest and it is thought by many that when he sees his case is hopeless he will make a clean breast of the affair. The case still continues to attract a large crowd of interested spectators.

PERSONALS.

Points About People Here and Elsewhere.

Mr. H. H. Cox, has been confined to his residence for several days past, we are pleased to see, is out again.

Mr. Charles Varian, one of our popular and promising young business men, has accepted a position in the establishment of Messrs. Miner & Pecor.

THE military will be detained at Catlettsburg for about three weeks longer.

AN advertisement in the want columns of the DAILY BULLETIN costs but ten cents for a single insertion and five cents for each additional one. It is very cheap advertising.

Look in at Hunt & Doyle's window and see the nicest lot of new embroideries ever brought to Maysville.

A FARMER living near this city, yesterday sold his crop of tobacco, the product of ten acres to J. C. Owens & Co., for $1,284. He received 14 cents a pound for it.

THE circulation of the DAILY BULLETIN, we are pleased to say, is rapidly increasing. It is our intention, as soon as we feel justified in doing so, to enlarge its proportions. We shall also strive to make it more acceptable to our readers.

THE wedding of Miss Ella Mathews and Mr. J. C. Newcomb, yesterday afternoon, in keeping with the tastes of the parties was a quiet affair and was attended by only the relatives and intimate friends of the family. Mr. and Mrs. Newcomb left the same evening for Ripley by the Bonanza.

THE DAILY and WEEKLY BULLETIN together have in Maysville, the suburbs and at Aberdeen, something over six hundred subscribers. It is, therefore, the best medium for advertising in the city. Where both papers are made use of by advertisers, we make a liberal discount from the regular rates. We respectfully invite a trial of our columns.

A Card.

General Burbridge claims that M. C. Hutchins, at this place, was one of the distinguished citizens of Kentucky who endorsed the shooting of young Hunt and Long, and the manner in which loyal men were forced to the privilege of packing hogs. Well! If Mr. Burbridge does not object to that statement, there is no reason why we should make a fuss about it.

I read the above in the Maysville Eagle of the 18th inst., with amazement. That Gen. Burbridge could have made such a claim is astounding. There is not a word of truth in it. Thomas Hunt was no guerrilla, no murderer, no robber. I was out of this state and did not know of his arrest until after his execution. No man deplored his taking off or the manner of it more than I did. He was a first cousin of my wife. Gen. Burbridge and myself have not been in political accord since the convention which nominated John M. Harlan for governor. As a member of the State Central Committee which met for organization a short time after said convention, I antagonized the claims of Burbridge, Runkle and Terrill, for membership in said committee by voting for Gen. Prall, W. A. Meriweather and Ballard. Gen. Burbridge opposed the nomination of Gen. Grant for the second term, I favored it; this widened the breach. When asked recently to endorse Gen. Burbridge for a foreign mission, I replied that he belonged to Pennsylvania. I have not written a line endorsing him for such a place. M. C. HUTCHINS.

Discovery of Gold in California.

The accounts vary slightly as to the time when gold was first discovered in California, but the most of them agree that the first find was made on the property of Sutter, in El Dorado County. Some claim the discovery was made in the month of February, 1848, while others date it a month earlier. An account, which is substantially correct, was published in the San Francisco Chronicle some time since, about as follows:

"On January 19, 1848, John W. Marshall was building a mill for himself and Sutter on the south fork of the American River, fifty-four miles east of Sutter's Fort. This mill, it was expected, would supply the ranches and settlements with pine lumber.

"On this particular morning Marshall picked up from the bed-rock of the race of the mill a small piece of yellow metal, which weighed about seventeen grains. It was malleable, heavier than silver, and in all respects resembled gold.

"Marshall showed the piece, in the afternoon, to those who were working at the mill. The result of the discussion which ensued was that the idea was rejected as to the gold theory. Marshall, however, was not satisfied, and afterward tested it with nitric acid, and found it was actually gold.

"He discovered pieces like it in all the surrounding gulches wherever he dug for it. The news of the discovery soon spread, and in April reports of the find were published. Sutter's mill became the district of attraction, which afterward was named Coloma, or Columa, from a tribe of Indians who lived in the neighborhood.

"The prospectors from there scattered in all directions, and by the month of June the discoveries had extended to all the forks of the American, Weber Creek, Hangtown Creek, the Cosumnes, the Mokelumne, Tuolumne, the Yuba, and Father River, and the news had gone almost to the ends of the earth."

A Confidence Dodge Played on the Western Coast.

Of the many tricks of those who live by their wits to take in the unwary, the "gold nugget pin dodge" is the most successful. This oft-practiced game was played upon a citizen who has often prided himself as being "no fool."

As he was passing the Baldwin Hotel, he saw a seedy, semi-respectable-looking party, who was walking a few steps ahead of him, stop, and, stooping, appear to pick up something bright, which, when held up to the light, was seen by the citizen to be a nugget pin, evidently solid gold, and weighing fully an ounce.

"What a lucky find!" remarked the overjoyed stranger to the citizen, as he gleefully held it up for the latter's inspection. "It's worth considerable," continued he, and it's a wind-fall to me, for I'm dead broke. I wish I could sell it."

"What do you want for it," asked the unsuspecting victim, who thought he seemed a chance to turn an honest penny by a neat business.

"Well, I don't know what it's worth. I wish there was a pawnshop open. Give me ten dollars and you can have it."

"Ten dollars for a $20 nugget; too much," thought the victim, and then "Can't do it," remarked he aloud.

"Well, I am hard up. Now, what will you give?" persevered the stranger, who appeared to hesitate to take less. The shrewd citizen finally secured the pin for $4.50, only to find when he had the purchase examined that it was a good imitation of gold, but being only made of brass, it was not worth as much as he paid for it by $4.49. The victim has cut another eye-tooth, and now declares that he would not buy a gold mine at any price from a stranger.—San Francisco Post.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK 1882.

The Sun for 1882, will make its thirtieth annual revolution under the present management, as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy, Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. The Sun's light is for mankind and womanhood of every sort, but its genial warmth is for the good, while its rays but discomfort on the blistering backs of the persons it wicked.

The Sun of 1882 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the forms, and a multitude of superfluous words and phrases. It undertook to report a fresh, succinct, unconvoluted way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest, and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of the Sun.

It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the dozen years past has been modeled after the Sun. Every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of the Sun's example.

The Sun of 1882, will be the same outspoken, unflinching, and interesting newspaper. By a liberal use of the means which in abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.

We shall print all the news, putting it into readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditionary yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with the Sun. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars, whether it be in Pennsylvania or in Brooklyn.

In politics we have decided opinions, and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of the Sun's political course.

The Weekly Sun gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of the unequalled merit, full market reports, and a liberal proportion of literary, scientific and domestic intelligence complete the Weekly Sun, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.

Who does not know and read and like the Sunday Sun, each number of which is a Goldenrod of interesting literature, with the poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor—matter enough to fill a good sized book, and is infinitely more varied and entertaining than any book, big or little?

Our idea of what a newspaper should be pleases you, send for the Sun.

Our terms are as follows:
For the daily Sun, a four-page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail is 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year, or including the Sunday paper, an eight-page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents per month, or $7.80 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of the Sun is also furnished separately at $1.20 a year, postage paid.

The price of the Weekly Sun, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free.
